UNIT-3-LECTURE-2
Effective Presentation Strategies

Lecture-2
Topic-Nuances of Delivery/ Modes of Delivery

Modes of Delivery

- Four Modes of Delivery for making Presentations:
- i) Extemporaneous
- ii) Manuscript
- iii)Impromptu
- iv)Memorization

Modes of Delivery

- i) Extemporaneous
- You must prepare before hand and rehearse your presentation.
- There is no need to learn every word and line .
- Your presentation will sound natural and spontaneous after thorough preparation.
- You are speaking while thinking
- This is the result of careful planning and exacting practice,
- where you collect the material and organize it meticulously.

Advantages	Disadvantages
As enough time to prepare , you work hard on central idea	If preparation is inadequate, you get lost and find yourself uncomfortable
Adaptation is possible.	If you read from note cards , your speech will lose spontaneity
Thorough preparation makes you feel secure and carry out your responsibility with great aplomb
It enables to move freely , with ease
You can be flexible in your use of language
Your delivery sounds natural and spontaneous and helps to develop rapport through eye contact

Modes of Delivery
ii)Manuscript :

- Material is written out and you are supposed to read it out aloud verbatim.
- There is no need to memorize the speech.
- For effective use of this mode , go through the material several times before hand till become familiar with the text
- You may rehearse with a friend or colleague
- You should know what is written where

Advantages	Disadvantages
It's a permanent and accurate record	You get less time for eye contact
No chance of tampering with facts and figures	No scope for non- verbal communication
Material is organized systematically. Keep in mind step by step development of main points	Adaptation is rather difficult
Language gets polished as you write and rewrite your material	In the absence of effective reading skill, you fumble over words, lose pace and miss punctuation marks etc.

Modes of Delivery

iii)Impromptu :

- It is used when you have to deliver an informal speech without preparation. For example , at a formal dinner party you may be invited to deliver a vote of thanks.
- Don't panic and babble something in unmethodical way, instead calmly state your topic and then preview the points you are to make. Support your points with examples, quotes, and anecdotes you recall at that time.
- Be brief as possible

Advantages	Disadvantages
You sound very natural	It lacks organized development of ideas
You get a chance to express your thought irrespective of what others think	No supplementary material to substantiate speech
You are spontaneous as you say what you feel	Chances of rambling are high
	Frequent use of vocalized pauses
	It can turn into failure if inadequate proficiency in language you use

Modes of Delivery

iv) Memorization:

- This method of presentation is very difficult for most of us.
- You memorize the entire speech
- Usually you memorize only the main parts and are in habit of writing key words
- This type of delivery stands somewhere between extemporaneous and manuscript presentation
- Speech is written out before hand , then committed to memory , and finally delivered from memory

Advantages	Disadvantages
Easy to maintain eye contact	Requires too much of time
The speaker can easily move and make use of appropriate non-verbal communication	Chances of making it a dull and monotonous
Possible to finish speech in allotted time	No flexibility or adaptation is possible
	Speaker gets flustered if forgets a word or sentence

Questions?

- Q1.Elaborate different modes of delivery with its advantages and disadvantages.
- Q2.Which nuance is used to hold the attention and interest of your audience? Explain.
- Q3. Elaborate the different formal & informal modes of delivery with its advantages & disadvantages