UNIT-4-LECTURE-1

Interview Techniques

Interview Techniques

- Introduction and Objectives:
- Psychological and Sociological Instrument.
- It is an interaction between two or more persons for a specific purpose .
- in which the interviewer asks interviewee specific questions in order to assess his suitability for recruitment , admission, promotion , or for an opinion .
- It is systematic method of contact with a person to know his views and a method of data collection.
- Interview is two party conversation in which at least one party has a specific serious purpose.
- You pass through interview situations very frequently in your life
- Egs- when you visit your doctor or lawyer

Objectives of Interview

- Generally Interviews are conducted to achieve some of the following objectives:
- To select a person for a specific task
- To monitor performance
- To collect information
- To exchange information
- To counsel

Types of Interview

- When we compare involvement and contribution of the interviewer and the interviewee there are three basic types:
- i) telling
- ii)telling and Listening
- iii)problem Solving
- i) telling: In this interview the flow of communication is almost entirely one way ---downwards .
- It is used effectively in directing time constrained situation.
- But it can cause hostility and defensive behaviour when the employee does not have the opportunity to participate .
- ii)telling and listening :
- More feedback from subordinate is allowed
- but the interviewer still maintains control over the flow of communication
- iii)problem Solving:
- The flow of communication is two- way.
- The bulk of communication is upwards , a genuine rapport is established ,ideas are pooled , and change facilitated.

Types of Interview

- Depending on their objective and nature , interviews can be categorized into following types:
- i)Job Interview: Candidate wants to learn about the position and the organization ;
- the employer wants to learn about the applicant's abilities .
- Initially these interviews are usually formal and structured .
- But later , they get spontaneous and interviewer explores the candidate's responses.
- ii) Information Interview: The interviewer seeks facts that bear on a decision or contribute to basic understanding
- Information flows mainly in one direction: one person asks a list of questions that must be covered and listens to the answers supplied by the other person,
- egs: doctor-patient, boss- subordinate

Types of Interview

- iii) Persuasive Interview: One person tells another about a new idea , product or service and explains why the other should act on his or her recommendations .
- These interviews require skill in drawing out and listening to others as well as the ability to impart information.
- iv) Exit Interview: The interviewer tries to understand why the interviewee is leaving the organization or transferring to another department or division.
- A departing employee can provide insight into whether the business is being handled effectively or it needs some improvement.
- v) Evaluation Interview: The supervisor periodically gives employee feedback on his or her performance.
- The supervisor and the employee discuss progress towards predetermined standards or goals for the coming year , as well the long term aspirations.

Types of Interview

- vi) Counseling Interview: A supervisor talks with an employee about personal problems that are interfering with work performance. The interviewer is concerned about the welfare of the employee as well of the organization..The goal is to establish facts , convey the company's concern , and steer the person towards a help.
- vii) Conflict resolution Interview: Two competing people or groups with opposing views explore their problems and attitude. The goal is to bring the two parties closer together , cause adjustments in perception and attitudes , create a more productive climate.
- viii) Disciplinary Interview: Supervisor tries to correct the behaviour of an employee who has ignored the organization's rules and regulations.
- The interviewer tries to get the employee to see the reason for the rules and to agree to comply. The interviewer explores the person's attitude .Neutral observations are more effective than critical comments

Types of Interview

- ix)Termination Interview : A supervisor informs an employee of reason for termination
- Interviewer tries to avoid involving the company in legal action and tries to maintain as positive relationship as possible with the interviewee. The interviewer gives reasons that are specific, accurate and verifiable.

Questions?

- Q.1. What the basic types of interviews when we compare the involvement and contribution of interviewer and the interviewee.
- Q2. Explain various types of interviews on the basis of their objective and nature.